Spotting the Signs of Elder Financial Abuse

Elder financial abuse is one of the fastest-growing scams targeting families today, and it often goes unnoticed until real harm is done. Knowing the warning signs can help protect the people you care about.

Watch for sudden or unexplained withdrawals, new “friends” or caregivers taking an unusual interest in finances, changes to account access, or a loved one appearing confused about transactions they didn’t authorize. Pressure to send money, buy gift cards, or share personal information is another major red flag.

If something feels off, trust your instincts. Encourage open conversations about money and remind loved ones that Texas Bridge CU is here to help review accounts, secure access and provide guidance.

Protecting our members — and their families — is always our priority.
